one of the active originators and managers of this affair, theraby indicating the grateful remembrance which Hawaii owes to Mr. Sargent. The Hawarian side of the table, was well filled with relanders, and those off liqued with them in business or by friendship. OSCAR WILDY.

The Apostle of Aestlepicism, Francisco a visit. He came in all his beauty of long hair, fastustic dress, and striking of long mar, mathasic crees, and straing atti-tudes. His platform dress which is not describable, suggests the re-appearance of a mediaeval courtier, freeh from a band-log. His out-of-door attire is more in keeping with His style of parting his hair in the middle, and covering his temples and cars, and also his clean-cut features give him a decideally feminine look, which even his voice does not help to correct. His first lecture at Platt's Half was, to a crowded audience which included the elife of society. Probably but little which he offered for the first filten minnies was heard understandingly; every one being occupied in taking in, and scanning, the person, dress and style of the speaker. It was really a new securition, although many were familiar with his stage appearance, from photographs. Gradually as the audience grew familier with him, and to his mannerisms of speech and presentiation they discovered, that a clever and well educated English pen-tleman was addressing them. His locative of course was of Art, and its cultivation by all ich and poor-art which ennobles and bean-ifier bussan life, art which desorates and forms, both common and beautiful its Mr. While gave four lectures in this city, but the attendance dwindled from the first one.
